KEITH BRION

Keith Brion is the director of the Yale University Band and a conductor in residence at the Yale School of Music. Since coming to Yale in 1973, he has conducted the Yale Band in tours of Europe, the American East Coast, Texas, California, and Puerto Rico. In the spring of 1978, he conceived a recreation of the historical sounds and sights of John Philip Sousa and his band, conducting the Yale Band in a series of concerts in New Haven, Massachusetts, and in New York's Carnegie Hall. The concerts met great popular and critical acclaim. The program was later taped for public television and was broadcast on National Public Radio. His Publications include four historical American band pieces of Charles Ives and D.W. Reeves. He is currently in charge of research coordination for the College Band Directors. Mr. Brion has performed as a flutist with the New Jersey and the New Haven Symphonies. He is a student of John Krell and Julius Baker.
